This is one of the most iconic scenes in film history, people still talk about this scene even though it came out over 50 years ago. This is the only 10 out of 10 movie I have ever seen. An example of a great real film and not some overhyped special effects driven tripe like Avatar. 5 days ago Henners1991 @kthevsd Sure, and I imagine at the time it was fantastic... unfortunately y'all have built up such a hype about it that when I finally see the real thing within the context of today, it just isn't shocking. 4 days ago cjs33139

Sometimes it makes me wonder if this scene was giving future serial killers ideas about how to murder women. I'd hate to think sickos were getting training in how to desensitize themselves towards violence. Hmmm. 1 week ago munkstaven this scene still makes me sick, masterpiece 1 week ago pandanese90 what makes this an outstanding slasher film is that Hitchcock uses great editing to show credible detail in such an early horror "slasher." often today's slasher fulfill the effect by using more gore such as popping eyes heads and etc. Hitchcock truly mastered the form of which is a modern day horror slasher. 1 week ago TrapsWonder Two things - First, I never stand under the shower head and turn the water on because if it's cold I just might have a fatal aneurysm. Second there should have been at least some blood on the wall as she was sliding down it, but I guess back then they would have censored that. 1 week ago zimmawoman oh god now whenever i have a shower im going to be checking the curtain 1 week ago Nickkiknack Fake blood didn't show up in movies back then very well because they were in black and white, so that blood that is going down the drain is chocolate syrup. 1 week ago Spiz321 SO FAKE it is hilarious 1 week ago PerfectLovinAngel when the actress who was killed in this scene saw this, she was traumatized and only took baths from then on! woah! lol i laughed at this scene but it was ok 1 week ago Bloxy123 FUNFACT: This was the very first American movie to view a toilet flushing. 2 1 week ago Tuomaslotte I actually found this hilarious :P To me it's showing you the reason why you should lock your bathroom door :P 1 week ago halladay3 this scene may be the most iconic but I prefer the Arbogast/Mother scene 1 week ago simontaker because the man (disguised in his dead mother) is a psycopatic 1 week ago 30inventionman Honey, are you home? @AngelicLove21 You have to watch the movie. 1 week ago stefers08 I have to say, I knew he was coming, but I still jumped. Unusual camera angles (for this time) but brilliantly interesting non the less. Alfred Hitchcock, you were a Genius! 1 week ago NeoTheo9 This movie is cooler than the scene for those who are judging it from this, LOL. 1 week ago samud30 Massakah666, I pity your ignorance! In this age where everything is high definition (explicit!) it is astonishing to hear that most people still think that the movie was in colour! Because they were adamant that the blood was red in the shower. It is to Hitchcock's credit that such a vivid and true cinematic achievement was accomplished.
You are probably the same idiot that got blown away by the 3D in Avatar but then bag out the movie in a few years time.
1 week ago xknightmage Didn't he actually use chocolate ago Massakah666 well, maybe in the 60's this was a great scene, but i can't understand how people call this (today) still a scary scene... in fact, i had to laugh when norman bates hit her with the knife. the position of norman bates '(when u see him with the knife) and the position of the woman doesn't fit. 50 years ago it was a great scene, but now it looks like a low-budget trash production. 1 week ago NeoTheo9 It's not scary in that sense... It's scary in the psychological way... Not in the "BOO!" way... 1 week ago kthevsd @Massakah666 You have got be kidding, it is not scary to us because we have seen so much gore in today's films. This is still one of the top 5 most iconic scenes in american film history(as ranked by the AFI). 5 days ago SunAndMoonIchiRuki It is a little corny, but it is indeed brilliantly shot! Especially now with everthing being a remake of something classic like friday the 13th, nightmare on elm st., halloween, my bloody valentine and future remakes hellraiser and the thing its sickening ! 2 2 weeks ago hethuszar01 In 1960, it was probably scary. Otherwise You and I would not know today who Hitchcock is. 2 2 weeks ago andymiller51 You should look at it within its social and historic context. 2 weeks ago JIsaacfilms At it's time it was. 2 weeks ago AnnoyingLittleShit not by today's standards, but at the time, this level of violence was unprecedented. So when you watch this movie, you have to take into that into consideration. Back in the 60's this scene would have had so many people affraid of taking showers. 2 weeks ago teddybrownie1 this is soooooo freaky 4 3 weeks ago phansterrr I actually lol'd hahah but when the killer pulled the shower curtain back and the music started playing so suddenly; that scared the shit outta me haha. 7 3 weeks ago HorseDancingTheWaltz @phansterrr me too, except i was watching it intently and my dog started barking as soon as the music started and i almost fell off my chair 1 week ago powdermannnreturns at 1:31 3 weeks ago walrustusks Where is the '57 Ford? 3 weeks ago QwertyYuk can anybody just explain why this is so popular? 3 weeks ago TerminalCriticism At the time (60') this was one of the most horrifying scenes ever seen in cinema. And, to be honest, even watching it now, it fills me with a tense anticipation of dread. 7 3 weeks ago QwertyYuk lol ^^ i get it 3 weeks ago Vertigo279 It was so unexpected. People who originally watched this back when it was first released thought that the film was entirely based around Janet Leigh's character. Then to have her, (the main character and a big movie star), suddenly killed off like that made it more dramatic. It also left them stunned as they wouldn't have a clue about what would happen next. Obviously, because the scene is so well-known today, the shock factor is worn off slightly. 4 3 weeks ago QwertyYuk ah thanks xD that explains 3 weeks ago Cath3yo i luled 3 weeks ago bradencookie the blood used in black and white movies were hersheys chocolate syrup. 3 weeks ago BeanTownKid97 is this only a classic cuz this is 1960 and this was like the coolest thing ever at the time 3 weeks ago kthevsd @BeanTownKid97 It's a classic because it's one of the best movies ever made. I've always found John Carpenter to be way more effective with creating suspense and fear. He uses a lot of Hitchcocks methods but he does them better. Psycho didn't scare me the first time I saw it, but John Carpenters Halloween scared the bejesus out of me the first time I saw it. 3 weeks ago numbcore Both didnt truly scare me tbh, but come on. Halloween was long and boring and uninteresting. Psycho was intriguing, interesting story, plot twist, way better imo. Now Carpenters "The Thing" that one was really good. 3 weeks ago kthevsd @arodaman Hitchcock is widely considered one of the best directors of all time, he had countless classics that are still iconic to this day- Psycho, Vertigo, North by Northwest, The 39 steps, Rear window, etc. John Carpenter is a decent horror director known for using gore instead of dread and suspense. 5 days ago markymark93 that wasnt scary at all 3 weeks ago TheCriminologistKRGR dude watch this before taking a bath 4 3 weeks ago kthevsd @markymark93 Listen little boy, when this movie came out millions of peope were terrified, back in the day this was extreme horror and suspence. I'm sorry but have you seen this movie ? It's perfection, which you never see in today's films with the exception of The Departed. 4 days ago kthevsd Lame movies ? Kid I like all movies, old films, new films, etc. How is this classic lame ? Have you even ever watched it ? What would some 16 year old teenybopper know about cinema ? You probably have never even heard of Kurosawa and I bet you have never even seen a Daniel Day Lewis or Meryl Streep movie in your life. No wonder everyone laughs at your generations taste in films. 4 days ago markymark93 actually i have seen this movie, and i have seen movies with daniel day lewis AND meryl streep.....so i wouldnt be so quick to judge. how can you say you "like new films" if you've been bashing my generation's movies the whole time? 3 days ago kthevsd @markymark93 If you have seen it than how can you find it lame ? It's an iconic movie. A masterpiece. Everyone bashes the movies of today, some are good(Scorsese movies) but most are mindless(like transformers). If you understand cinema you have to admit the quality of films had drastically gone down. 3 days ago XxINCHAINSxX @markymark93 And whos obsessing over their opinion on youtube? Hmmm... But yeah this is genius because you have to do the thinking and nowadays they have blood splattered and people screaming and a masked guy and nowadays that's scary. Alfred Hitchcock originally didn't want the chilling background music during this now famous murder scene. He had to be convinced that it would be more effective with the music. Unless they see blood splattered everywhere and a killer in a mask, they are lost. They don't get Psycho, because most horror movies today, do the thinking for you. If it isn't on the screen, it isn't in the movie. Psycho is a classic, because for 90% it plays with your mind. Each scene says something, as well as the characters. Black/white is also scarier. Scene sets and people don't stand out like color. breasts in the background, out of focus - very effective. A classic. 2 1 month ago wha65 This is a great scene by Hitchcock. The flow of blood implying Marion's life, is literally going down the drain. The tear drop reflects her remorse at stealing the money. Norman is into birds and taxiderming.

He walks in and sees Marion's lifeless body. In shock he walks backwards and knocks a framed picture off the wall, which hits the ground. It's a picture of a bird. shot of the shower head, the camera had to be equipped with a long lens. The inner holes on the spout were blocked and the camera placed farther back, so that the water appears to be hitting the lens but actually went around and past it. 2 months ago Crell1 Wow! Thanks! Very clever of them. Today they would just do it digital. But that's the easy way. Lol. 2 months ago LadyOFtheAltar oh...so that's where the shower scene was from... cool... 2 months ago jdmeghatch I took a film class. If you watch it frame by frame they never actually show her being stabbed. They stabbed a melon several times cut out the frames showing the melon and spliced in frames of the woman screaming. Then my understanding is they used dye in the water. It seems more real than a lot of new movies because the knife had resistance when pulled out like a real stabbing. Hitchcock was well aware of that post- morten condition; he was told that Miss Leigh would have to wear uncomfortable contact lenses for days in preparation for the scene. Being considerate of his actors as he was (he always made sure that there was warm water in the tank feeding the showerhead), he decided to forgo the `contacts'. In the 1998 remake, Gus Van Sant made a point of showing the heroine's pupil of her visible eye clearly dilated. Can't really blame them since the definition of classic changes overtime. To be frank I didn't really like this one too much since you can't help but laugh at the violent scenes in it. Janet Leigh was a big star then, and the audiences were absolutely NOT expecting her to get killed off as soon as she did. They thought she was the main character. Before you criticize, learn a bit of film history. The stuff you see everyday has desensitized you. It has to start somewhere -- and for this type of horror film, Psycho was the beginning. 12 6 months ago Niekpas Holy shit, you don't have to start ranting. BUT THIS? what the FUCK? 7 months ago terricotapie123 sorry but you are rong the quote form the shinning isnt heres jack but heres johnny and just the idea of not being able to defend your self in the shower is horrific enough as well as the idea of a split personality which was frowned upon in that era hitchcock was brilliant the way he used film techniques to create suspense he has inspired many directors probably steven speilberg who did direct the shinning only past comment if you actully have something to back up your point not to look cool 2 7 months ago AnnoyingLittleShit you've never watched the whole movie have you? It's one of the most incredible psychological thrillers ever.... prick. 2 7 months ago Atheist269 Wow i wouldn't even have minded your comment except for the fact that u had to put that little "prick" there just to make urself feel good. Well for your info, fag, this does NOT look like a good movie. That is just my opinion, and does not make me a prick, and this scene is as far from fucking scary as anything i can come up with right now. 7 months ago wilky1986 It's not supposed to scare you, fucktard. This movie opened a door for slasher/horror films as we know it. You are one of the very few individuals that doesn't like this film, or think they don't like it. Do you need over the top, sell out type of special effects? This movie is a fantastic psychological thriller. You're very closed minded I can tell 2 6 months ago Atheist269 "your very closed minded i can tell" Your very retarded i can tell. I am not close-minded at all and whatever the fuck you people say i still think this movie sucks balls. Everybody has their opinion and this is mine, so good luck trying to change it fag. 6 months ago wilky1986 First of all, I didn't spell "you're" like "your" as you did. I at least have the education not to make elementary school usage errors in grammar. I bet you like films like the grudge...cheesy ass special effects with no fucking plot or point to it. Since you claim you're an atheist, I can see I have already lost this pointless argument because you know everything. All you atheists are pathetic...liking pointless films for a pointless life 6 months ago Atheist269 You really want to go into arguing about grammar when you started with "closed minded"? Heave your head out of your ass buddy. And actually i fucking can't stand the grudge. Neither can i stand the SAW series FYI. I like movies like "The Shining", "The hills have eyes" (only #1) and "Tcsm: the beginning" a little bit. Don't make your assumptions so fast because they are dead wrong. And i'm way too old to get insulted by your lame atheist insults. Grow up. 6 months ago wilky1986 Too old oh boy I'm scared. You got me there big time. My condolences...I guess since I'm 23, I'm not old enough to state my opinions to older people. Oh by the way, you would like The Hills Have Eyes...cheesy special effects. The Shining TV version was actually better because it actually portrayed the book correctly but you probably don't read since you're atheist and you own the world with your insecurity 6 months ago Atheist269 Wow you really are truly stupid. I fucking started with saying that IT IS MY OPINION that this movie IS NOT scary and fucking SUCKS. you can reply to this as many times more as you want but it is not going to change my opinion you fucking fagg0t, so you might as well stop. Now your coming with "i'm not old enough to state my opinions". Your pathetic. And HH1 was not about special effects AT ALL. a movie with good special effects is Transformers 1 and 2. 6 months ago TOHOFIEND54 why did you bring up the athiest angle? just cause he doesn't read the bible doesn't mean he doesn't read at all. 6 months ago wilky1986 You are? 6 months ago wilky1986 You're gay 6 months ago Atheist269 Fine dude you win. i stop arguing. i still don't like the movie tho so lol... 6 months ago Qlicky show hide Dude, fuck off, you and your special effects!!! A frame-by-frame analysis shows that the knife visibly penetrates the skin by a fraction of an inch, so briefly (just three frames of film, or about an eighth of one second) as to be subliminal. This was done by filming the knife being drawn away, and reversed. 11 months ago TanyaaaBlis This has been flagged as spam show hide Not Spam I loved your video.
